He had served in various positions by appointment and was made a Colonel on the staff of Gov. McCreary. Mr. Metcalf's health began to fail about a year ago and later he was stricken with paralysis. LETTON.
 —Mr. John W. Letton, aged fifty-four, of Paris, familiarly known here as "Crackerjack," died at the home of his sister, Mrs. Duke Bowles, on Main street, Wednesday night, after an illness of several years from locomotor ataxia.
 Mr. Letton had been an active man prior to the attack of locomotor ataxia, which left him almost helpless. For several years he conducted a restaurant in the store room now occupied by the Singer Sewing Machine office. He was later engaged in the manufacture of candy and "crackerjack," in which he specialized at county fairs and other meetings in this and other States. For several years he had operated a small lunch stand adjoining the clothing store of Mr. W. T. Talbott until his illness assumed such a serious turn that he was confined to his room.

Mr. Letton was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Will Letton, who resided at the old home on the Jacks-town pike, near Paris. He was of a jolly disposition, and was always in a joking mood, not even physical ailments tending to keep back the mirth that held a large place in his make-up.

KAPOK.

Kapok, or fiber silk, will not sink no matter how long it is left in the water, and has remarkable buoyancy. It was first brought to the attention of the United States Government by Lieutenant Edmonds, and has subsequently come into wide use as a material for life preservers. One of the latest kapok devices is a duck hunting coat lined with this fiber, so that if the hunter fall overboard he will float.

WATRFOWL SAVED.

From all parts of the United States are coming reports that the wild ducks are unusually abundant; it can now no longer be doubted that the migratory bird law has saved these valuable game birds from extermination. Dr. William T. Hornaday asserts that they are now steadily increasing. He believes that song and insectivorous birds have also been saved by timely legislation, but he says that upland game birds and the big game of the West are being rapidly exterminated.
